“Defining Moments: Ethical Leadership for Equity”

We have never been here before. We're living in exciting, but unprecedented, and challenging educational, social and political times. How you respond to the many complex diversity and equity challenge you regularly encounter may define individual and collective destinies for generations to come.

- How well do you feel prepared to lead your schools, districts and communities in the challenging conversations around race, equity, poverty, immigration, politics and school improvement in today's complex world?
- Are you equipped with the critical problem-solving and decision-making skills needed to make ethical and effective choices as a part of your daily life in your school or district setting?
- How do you respond daily to challenging and complex leadership dilemmas that ultimately define who you are- as a respected educational leader, as a member of your community, and a concerned citizen?

This summer the Penn Excellence and Equity Consortia will host a two-day institute for district and school leadership teams that will focus on effectively addressing the “real-life” challenges of leading for equity, and developing dispositions and skills needed to make ethical and effective decisions. The Institute will include a variety of learning experiences led by nationally, regionally and locally recognized leaders in our equity work in both formal and informal sessions.

Exciting and stimulating learning opportunities will nurture dialog, reflection and connection with colleagues across the region in unpacking impactful solutions to REAL equity and diversity related dilemmas. Sessions will be facilitated by nationally recognized leaders, as well as many of our own school and district equity leaders from our PA, NJ and NY consortia districts.
