Princeton, NJ—TregoED a leading expert in collaborative decision making and problem solving for school leaders, is pleased to announce two new members to its professional development and consulting team.

TregoED, provider of collaborative problem-solving and decision-making processes for K-12 education leaders, welcomes Dr. Lawrence Harris and Dr. Matthew Sipes to their leadership development and success team. Both men come with a high degree of expertise and experience in the skills necessary to be a successful leader in education today.

Harris brings a wealth of knowledge and hands-on experience in supporting and cultivating a positive and inclusive culture and climate to get the best thinking of the education and surrounding community. He has launched several critical and expansive district-wide initiatives and has specialized experience and earned recognition for his efforts in developing and implementing college and career-readiness strategies in his district. With strong communication and problem-solving skills, he is an excellent teacher and resource to educators who wish to build their capacity to strategic thinking and decision making.

From Special Education teacher to district leadership team, Sipes has proven himself to be skilled in the use of strategic thinking to gain a deep understanding of the organization and its goals so that solutions and initiatives will be driven by district needs. His firsthand experience with quickly and successfully transitioning over 20,000 students and teachers to virtual learning during the COVID-19 pandemic and subsequent development of the necessary professional learning community and programs aimed at improving learning outcomes for vulnerable students have provided him with the experience and framework to assist others in achieving success through decision making excellence.

Both educators are dedicated to ensuring systems and initiatives support student learning. The significant insights and experience they have gained from their previous leadership positions will increase the capabilities of the TregoED team to reach its mission to help organizations develop the capacity of their greatest resource—their people.
